Why this tool matters

Speaking the ruthless, objective language of finance to defend the fragile biosphere, proving that extreme heat and rising tides are not just environmental tragedies, but severe economic liabilities demanding immediate action.

Evidence we produce

A standardized climate disclosure report mapping municipal climate-related financial risks, resilience actions, and greenhouse gas emission trajectories.

Duration & Material

Duration · 3 to 6 months for data gathering and disclosure

Material · CDP-ICLEI Track questionnaire, TCFD reporting guidelines, municipal climate risk models

Reference case

In 2023, over 1,100 cities utilized the CDP-ICLEI Track to report more than 8,000 urban sustainability actions. By disclosing this data, local governments provide the empirical accountability necessary for UN-backed campaigns like Race to Zero and Race to Resilience, bridging the gap between local public works and international green capital markets.
