Forcing the administration to put its name on the line; transforming vague political promises into a binding contract that the community can use to demand accountability.

A formally signed charter or policy mandate that publicly commits local authorities and elected officials to support, fund, and implement the urban intervention,.

Duration & Material

Duration · 1 to 2 months of negotiation and drafting

Material · Policy briefs, legislative review documents, formal municipal resolutions

Reference case

Within the UN-Habitat Incremental and Participatory Toolbox for Urban Planning, examining the political champions and decision-makers of the urban planning system is a mandatory first step. By securing a clear mandate and aligning the project with the broader institutional structure from week one, planning teams prevent their technical work from being discarded during future political transitions.
